DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-34 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nakamoto (US Patent 6,097,138) in view of Chang et al (US Patent 6,436,221).

Nakamoto discloses a field emission cold-cathode device. The process for making such a device involves forming carbon nanotube layer 26 on support substrate 12 and cathode interconnecting layer 28. Conductive material 34 is then formed over the entire surface of substrate 12. Portion of conductive material layer 34 are then removed to form patterns. See col. 7, lines 17-45 and col. 8, lines 36-64.

However, Nakamoto does not disclose the stripping as claimed by the applicant. Regarding this difference, the applicant is directed to the reference of Chang.

Chang discloses a method of improving field emission efficiency for fabricating carbon nanotube field emitters. This process involves forming a film on the substrate and stripping the film to remove portion of the carbon nanotube layer. See col. 3, lines 49-62.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to remove portion of the carbon nanotube later by stripping, as taught by Chang, in the process of Nakamoto in order to provide a desired pattern for the carbon nanotubes. Without the disclosure of unexpected results, it is the examiner's position that the decomposing, coating and various materials employed are within the purview of one having ordinary skill in the art and would have been obvious to employ in the process of Nakamoto in view of Chang as described above based upon desired physical properties of the articles being manufactured.
